

Table of Contents

Contributors	vii
Preface	xiii
Clare M. Hasler (University of California, Davis)
1. The Impact of Regulations on the Business of Nutraceuticals in the United States: Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow Kathie L. Wrick (The Food Group)
2. The Regulatory Context for the Use of Health Claims and the Marketing of Functional Foods: Global Principles Michael Heasman (Food for Good)	37
3. Regulation of Quality and Quality Issues Worldwide Joy Joseph (Pharmavite Corporation)	55
4. Organic Food Regulations: Part Art, Part Science Kathleen A. Merrigan (Tufts University)	69
5. Health Claims: A U.S. Perspective Victor Fulgoni (Nutrition Impact, LLC)	79
6. Food and Drug Administration Regulation of Dietary Supplements Stephen H. McNamara (Hyman Phelps & McNamara, PC)	89
7. Tropicana Pure Premium and the Potassium Health Claim: A Case Study Carla McGill (Florida Department of Citrus)	101
8. The Importance of the Court Decision in Pearson v. Shalala to the Marketing of Conventional Food and Dietary Supplements in the United States Elizabeth Martell Walsh, Erika King Lietzan, Peter Barton Hutt (Covington & Burling)	109
9. Dietary Supplements and Drug Constituents: The Pharmanex v. Shalala Case and Implications for the Pharmaceutical and Dietary Supplement Industries Daniel A. Kracov, Paul D. Rubin, Lisa M. Dwyer (Patton Boggs, LLP)	137
10. The Role of the Federal Trade Commission in the Marketing of Functional Foods Lesley Fair (Federal Trade Commission)	149