Contents

|    | INTRODUCTION by Professor Lord Blackett      | page VII |
|----|--|----------|
|    | List of COSTED members                       | xv       |
|    | Acknowledgements                             | xvii     |
| I  | SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY IN ECONOMIC           |          |
|    | DEVELOPMENT                                  | I        |
|    | The less-developed world                     | I        |
|    | Economic growth and technical progress       | 5        |
|    | Industrialized countries                     | 7        |
|    | Implications for less-developed countries    | 12       |
|    | Science policy                               | 15       |
|    | Agricultural development                     | 16       |
|    | Industrial development                       | . 19     |
|    | The transfer of technology                   | 21       |
|    | Choice of technology                         | 24       |
|    | Research institutions                        | 26       |
|    | The role of universities                     | 31       |
| 11 | SCIENCE POLICY                               | 34       |
|    | Introduction                                 | 34       |
|    | Development goals and science policy         | 35       |
|    | The scope of science planning                | 36       |
|    | Organization for science policy              | 38       |
|    | Effectiveness of science policy              | 41       |
|    | Expenditure on R and D                       | 43       |
|    | Fundamental research                         | 49       |
|    | Regional co-operation                        | 52       |
| ш  | AGRIGULTURAL DEVELOPMENT                     | 53       |
|    | Introduction                                 | 53       |
|    | Industrial and agricultural inter-dependence | 56       |
|    | Agricultural development                     | 58       |
|    | Agricultural strategy                        | 59       |
|    | = =:   | 50       |

vi contents

|    | Improved technology                        | page 63 |
|----|--|---------|
|    | Agricultural research                      | 66      |
|    | Extension services                         | 71      |
|    | Mechanization                              | 79      |
|    | Multiple cropping                          | 80      |
|    | Economic and institutional factors         | 82      |
|    | Manpower                                   | 89      |
|    | Co-operative research                      | 90      |
|    | Forest and sea resources                   | 93      |
| ΙV | INDUSTRIALIZATION AND RESEARCH             | 96      |
|    | Introduction                               | 96      |
|    | Technological innovation                   | 102     |
|    | Transfer mechanisms                        | 105     |
|    | International corporations                 | 109     |
|    | Patents, licences, and know-how agreements | III     |
|    | Consultants                                | 115     |
|    | Industrial research                        | 116     |
|    | Research and technical services            | 121     |
|    | Research management                        | 124     |
|    | Choice of techniques                       | 126     |
| v  | EDUCATION AND MANPOWER                     | 132     |
|    | Introduction                               | 132     |
|    | Manpower planning and education            | 133     |
|    | New approaches to science teaching         | 137     |
|    | Secondary and vocational education         | 139     |
|    | Universities and higher education          | 141     |
|    | New technology in education                | 148     |
|    | The scientific community                   | 149     |
|    | Managers and entrepreneurs                 | 152     |
|    | SUMMARY                                    | 156     |
|    | Index of works quoted                      | 163     |
|    | General index                              | 170     |