

CONTENT

		Page
Chapter 1	The Ocean, Its Potentialities and Products	1
Chapter 2	Salt from Sea Water	12
Chapter 3	The Refining of Sea Salt	27
Chapter 4	Magnesium, Bromine and Other Products from Sea Water	37
Chapter 5	The Red Algae of Economic Importance : Agar and Related Phycocolloids	47
Chapter 6	The Brown Algae – Algin from Kelps and Fucooids	94
Chapter 7	Pearls and the Pearl Industry	107
Chapter 8	Mother-of-Pearl and Blister Pearls	124
Chapter 9	The Precious Coral Industry	141
Chapter 10	Characteristics of Marine Fishes	147
Chapter 11	Fluctuations in Abundance of Marine Fishes : Their Measurement, Causes and Prediction	181
Chapter 12	Economic Importance of the World's Fisheries	191
Chapter 13	American Fishing Gear and Fishery Methods	234
Chapter 14	Fish and Shellfish as Food, Characteristics of Fresh Fish : Appearance, Chemical Composition, and Nutritive Value	282
Chapter 15	Transportation of Fishery Products	307
Chapter 16	Refrigeration and Freezing of Fish	328
Chapter 17	The Principles of Fish salting – The Salting of Cod and Other Ground Fish	361
Chapter 18	Salting of Other Fish	375
Chapter 19	Preservation of Fish by Smoking and Drying	394
Chapter 20	Canning of fish ad fish Products	425
Chapter 21	Miscellaneous Processes of Preserving Fish	456
Chapter 22	Fish Meal and oil	469
Chapter 23	Fish Liver Oils	493
Chapter 24	Fish Glue and Isinglass	524
Chapter 25	Manufacture of Leather from Marine Sources	538
Chapter 26	The Oyster Industry of the World	550
Chapter 27	The Clam Industry of the United States	576
Chapter 28	The American Shrimp Industry	590
Chapter 29	The American Crab Industry	608
Chapter 30	The Lobster Fishery	632
Chapter 31	Marine Turtles and Terrapins	655
Chapter 32	Miscellaneous Shellfish Industries of the United States	666
Chapter 33	The Whaling Industry :Whales, Dolphins, and Porpoises	684
Chapter 34	Seal Fisheries	716
Chapter 35	Commercial Sponges	733
Chapter 36	Some Problems of the Fisheries	752
Index		767