

CONTENTS

Part I – WHICH ARE THE SEASONINGS?

(a) Taste and aroma	5
(b) The herb aromas	7
(c) The aromatic seed aromas	16
(d) The spice aromas	19
(e) The tastes	30
(f) Saltiness	31
(g) Bitterness, hotness and meatiness	32
(h) Sweetness and sourness	33
(i) Sweet, sweet-sour and savoury dishes	36
(j) The food acids	37
(k) Wine	38
(l) Vinegar	39
(m) Lactic acid	39
(n) The sweet-sour and the savoury taste	40

Part II – HOW WERE THE SEASONINGS USED IN THE PAST?

(a) Roman cookery	46
(b) The sweet-sour cookery of the Lombards	49
(c) The sweet-sour cookery of the French	55
(d) The sweet-sour cookery of the English	60
(e) The end of sweet-sour cookery	65
(f) The rise of savoury cooking	71
(g) The age of hash	77
(h) The age of elegance	81

Part III – THE SEASONING OF FOOD TODAY

(a) The nature of the problem	91
(b) The role of the cook in the art of cookery	92
(c) The natural flavour of food	93
(d) Seasonings – when to use them and when not to use them	95
(e) The rule of natural flavour	97
(f) The rule of flavour harmony	97
(g) The rule of flavour balance	101
(h) The making and balancing of a savoury spice mix	104
(i) The making and balancing of a sweet herb mix	105

(j) The freshness of herbs, seeds and spices	107
(k) The growing and drying of seasoning herbs	108
(l) Seeds and spices – whole or ground?	109
(m) The role of water in cooking	111
(n) Extracting the flavour from herbs, seeds and spices	112
(o) Gravy	115
(p) Meat stock	116
(q) The sauce	120
(r) Creams and creaming	124

APPENDIX Condiments and seasonings

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SUPPLIERS ADVERTISEMENTS