

CONTENTS

Foreword	E. J. Da Silva	v
Preface		vii
Section I:	INDONESIAN TEMPE AND RELATED FERMENTATIONS: Protein-rich vegetarian meat substitutes	1
Section II.	INDIGENOUS FERMENTED FOODS INVOLVING AN ACID FERMENTATION: Preserving and enhancing organoleptic and nutritional qualities of fresh foods	95
Section III.	INDIGENOUS FERMENTED FOODS IN WHICH ETHANOL IS A MAJOR PRODUCTS: Types and nutritional significance of primitive wine and beers and related alcoholic foods	301
Section IV.	CHINESE SOY SAUCE, JAPANESE SHOYU, JAPANESE MISO, SOUTHEAST ASIAN FISH SAUCES AND PASTES, AND RELATED FERMENTED FOODS: Indigenous amino acid/peptide sauces and pastes with meat-like flavors	433
Section V.	MUSHROOMS: Producing single cell (microbial) protein on ligno-cellulosic or other food and agricultural wastes	573
Section VI.	GENERAL PAPERS RELATED TO INDIGENOUS FERMENTED FOOD: Contributions of the western world to knowledge of indigenous fermented foods of the orient The importance of microbial genetics in indigenous food fermentations New uses for traditional food fermentations Mycotoxin problems in indigenous fermented foods and new methods for mycotoxin analysis	605
Index		569