

CONTENTS

Foreword	xi
Introduction	xiii
1 The history of glass	1
1.1 Glass in Egypt	1
1.2 A revolution in technology: the glassblowing pipe	3
1.3 Glass in the period of the Roman Empire	4
1.4 From luxury product to everyday item	5
1.5 The role of Venice	7
1.6 Glass in Germany	8
1.7 From art nouveau to modern glass design	10
1.8 On the path to glass technology	10
1.9 Otto Schott – founder of modern glass technology	11
1.10 Glassmaking in the USA (rough outline)	14
1.11 Glass all over the world	15
2 Glass the material	16
2.1 What is glass	16
2.2 General characteristics of the glassy state	17
2.3 Broad classification of glass types	23
2.4 Raw materials for the manufacture of glass	26
3 The glassmelt	35
3.1 Melting furnaces and melting tanks	35
3.2 Fuels	41
3.3 The melting process	44
4 Flat glass	51
4.1 The production and use of common types of flat glass	51
4.2 Technical identification of soda-lime flat glasses	63
4.3 Other types of flat glass	63
4.4 Processed flat glass	66

5	Hollowware and glass tubing	84
5.1	The most important types of hollowware	84
5.2	The shaping of hollowware	85
5.3	The drawing of hollowware	93
5.4	Finishing of hollowware	95
5.6	Glass tableware	102
5.7	Other hollowware	108
5.8	Finishing of hollowware	109
6	Special glasses and their uses	121
6.1	Fused silica (fused quartz or quartz glass)	121
6.2	Borosilicate glasses for industrial and laboratory use	123
6.3	Pharmaceutical glass	127
6.4	Glasses for electrotechnology and electronics	130
6.5	Electrode glasses	149
6.6	Optical and Ophthalmic glass	149
6.7	Glass-fiber	168
6.8	Glass-ceramics	183
6.9	Porous glass and foam glass	186
6.10	A glance into the future	188
7	Environmental protection in the glass melting process	19
7.1	Glass melting	190
7.2	Waste disposal	192
8	Glass as an economic factor	194
Appendix		196
Glass museums		196
Explanation of physical symbols and units		196
Attenuation of radiation		197
Technical literature on glass		198
Index		199