

CONTENTS

1. Importance and educational value of geography	1
Importance of geography	1
Educational value	7
2. The nature and spirit of geography teaching	10
Purpose of the Source Book	10
Conflicting definitions of geography	10
Geography as a synthesis	12
Geography as a study of the spatial relations of phenomena	20
Geography as the science of land use	30
3. Teaching techniques: direct observation	36
Geography and the child's mental development	37
Teaching techniques based on direct observation	39
Conclusion	73
4. Teaching techniques: indirect observation	75
The ordinary lesson	75
Notes for a lesson on Malaya	76
The lesson using large-scale maps	81
The use of pictures, photographs and charts	84
The use of projected pictures	88
The use of sample studies	91
Other lesson material	107
The use of written passages from travel books	124
Practical work in the classroom	130
Tests and examinations	131
General conclusion	140
5. Teaching material	142
The chalkboard	142
Textbooks	147
Atlases	148
Terrestrial globes	149
Wall-maps	150
Instruments	151
Specimen collections	155
Conclusion	157
The opaque projector	157
Projectors	160

Duplicators	162
The cinematograph	163
Television	164
Other miscellaneous appliances	165
Map Collections	166
The geography library	169
6. The geography room	171
Class Seated area	172
Teaching area	173
Maps and picture displays	174
Teacher's demonstration desk	175
Globes	176
Projection facilities	177
Class working area	178
Storage space	182
Conclusion	184
7. The organization of geography teaching	189
Syllabuses	189
Outline of a general geography syllabus	191
Outline of a regional geography syllabus	196
Practical considerations	198
8. Sources of documentation	201
Periodicals	201
Bibliographies	203
A succinct international bibliography	204
Teaching material	236
International statistics	252
Conclusion	254